Week 6 Preview: Netti Proves He's Still on Top

Commish

Week 5 Recap:

Great week: Netti (197.42) was the week's highest scorer, beating Ryan by just 5.84 in the closest matchup of the week to improve to 8-2. Ryan also had a great week, scoring a rare 190+, but just got unlucky in his matchup. Justin bounced back with 181.80, taking down Wawro by over 69 points to move to 7-3. Tommy secured another 2-0 week with a big win over Rizzo, climbing to 6-4. Finally, Max rebounded from last week's lowest score to beat Nick and get back to .500.

Good week: Rizzo finished in the top 6 but couldn't outlast Tommy, falling a game behind Netti in the standings. Mitchie took care of Petro to improve to 6-4, but missed the top 6 by just 5.62. Troy did what he needed to do to put a point on the board, upsetting the Chiefless Carbs comfortably despite finishing outside the top 6.

Disappointing week: Carb followed last week's 153.94 with just 70.16 as the bye weeks hit hard, dropping back to .500. Nick got 39.46 from Drake Maye but couldn't turn it into a win. Petro and Wawro also went 0-2, falling to 3-7 and 2-8, respectively.

Week 6 Power Rankings:

1. MillerLiteMatt (8-2) -
2. midrangepullup (7-3) ^2
3. GinnyGotSackedBy95#Mole (7-3) v1
4. Tom, son of Tom (6-4) ^1
5. Bijan's Army (5-5) ^2
6. Stick Season (6-4) -
7. The Wun Wuns (5-5) ^1
8. Weener cheese (5-5) v5
9. Kirk Thuggins (3-7) -
10. Nick Collins HOF (2-8) -
11. Oh no! We suck again! (3-7) ^1
12. The Hebrew Hammers (3-7) v1

Week 6 Preview:

Game of the Week:
#3 GinnyGotSackedBy95#Mole (7–3) vs.

#8 Weener cheese (5–5)

Rizzo looks to keep pace with Netti after a tough loss to Tommy. Carb looks to remember how to score points after putting up just 70.16 last week. Getting Mahomes and Kenneth Walker back from their bye should help, but he needs more than 1.90 from CeeDee Lamb. Rizzo got solid production from Nabers and Chase last week and now gets Tet back as well. With an upset, Carb can prove to be a contender this season. With another win, Rizzo can keep pushing pressure on the league's #1 team.

#2 midrangepullup (7–3) vs. #9 Kirk Thuggins (3–7)

Justin bounced back in a big way, getting 52.60 from Stafford and Love along with 29.30 from Christian Watson. His team put up 181.80 despite quieter weeks from Jonathan Taylor and Nico Collins. Nick got a huge 39.46 from Drake Maye but still went 0-2. He needs more help from his receivers after Higgins, Vele, and Antonio Williams combined for just 12.40. Another big week from Maye would certainly help, too.

#5 Bijan's Army (5–5) vs. #7 The Wun Wuns (5–5)

Ryan scored 191.58 last week and still couldn't get two wins. Max scored 144.04 and went 2-0. Fantasy can be cruel sometimes. Both arrive at .500, with a chance to build some momentum. Parker Washington and Garrett Wilson apparently saw last week's meme, combining for 47.30 after putting up just 5.70 the week before. Max got a much-needed 30.50 from Josh Allen, but Herbert contributed just 10.24. He (and the Chargers as a team) just simply stinks now.

#1 MillerLiteMatt (8–2) vs.
#12 The Hebrew Hammers (3–7)

Netti responded to last week's criticism with 197.42, so we may need to stop giving him bulletin-board material. Gibbs led the way with 35.20, while Pickens, McBride, Henry, and Lawrence all topped 20. Petro got 53.54 from Goff and Burrow but couldn't overcome quiet weeks elsewhere, including just 4.90 combined from Montgomery and Metcalf. My team fucking stinks. Netti, I yield.

#4 Tom, son of Tom (6–4) vs.
#10 Nick Collins HOF (2–8)

Tommy has gone 4-0 over the last two weeks and looks to keep rolling against Wawro. Daniels and Bowers combined for 55.26 last week, with another 21 from the Packers defense. Wawro got 30.50 from Bucky Irving, but too many others failed to contribute. Lamar's availability remains a big question for his lineup. Can Wawro slow him down, or will Tommy keep heading toward a first TDL playoff appearance?

#6 Stick Season (6–4) vs. #11 Oh no! We suck again! (3–7)

Mitchie and Troy both won their matchups last week without finishing in the top 6. Puka carried Mitchie with 29.20, while his QBs combined for just 20.92. Troy got 41.30 from Freiermuth and LaPorta, plus another 21 from his kicker. Those points all count, but he'd probably appreciate more from Dak and the rest of the lineup. At least these guys get to watch the league's most exciting offense every week in Pittsburgh!

